OVERVIEW OF EXPERIENCE

Amanda Schipp is a Senior Healthcare Consultant with Milliman. She joined the firm in 2021. Amanda brings over 15 years of health policy and government experience with expertise in helping clients navigate the complex federal statutory and regulatory landscape of publicly funded healthcare and social services programs. She has demonstrated leadership in strategic program development and reform, stakeholder engagement and communications, federal waiver negotiations, and reimbursement and financing strategies for government funded programs.

Prior to joining Milliman in 2021, Amanda had a healthcare and government relations legal practice in which she worked closely with government leaders, health plans, and other healthcare clients. She has counseled clients on a wide variety of health care policy matters including Medicaid waiver design and federal negotiation support, strategies for expanded coverage of behavioral health services, managed care contracting and oversight requirements, and delivery system and payment reform, including value-based purchasing.

She has been intimately involved in the development and implementation of several groundbreaking Section 1115 Medicaid demonstration waivers, becoming a national leader in drafting and negotiating complex Medicaid waiver applications, extensions and amendments. Amanda is well-versed in both the formal guidance and unofficial policies of CMS and brings her years of experience working with states and the federal government to assist her clients with their individual needs. Prior to consulting, Amanda gained further experience in her role at a state's health and human services agency, where she served as Strategic Initiatives Programs Director, managing the coordination of health policies across all the divisions within the state's largest agency.
