PROCEDURES

Reporting a Work-related Injury or Illness

The State encourages a prompt reporting of Work-related Injury or Illness so that rapid response and appropriate action may be taken. In the event of a Work-related Injury or Illness, the following steps must be followed immediately:

Individuals who have experienced and/or observed a Work-related Injury or Illness must report the incident as soon as they become aware of the injury/illness to

- Agency HR representative, and
- the reporting employee's supervisor; or
- any other agency management official.

Employees who experience or observe a Work-related Injury or Illness must provide the employing agency with an accurate, written record of the injury or illness. Verbal reports of Work-related Injury or Illness must be reduced to writing by either the individual who experienced or observed the Work-related Injury or Illness or by the agency official who received the report. All employees have a right to make such a report and all members of management and the agency HR representative who receive such reports have an obligation to ensure the report is submitted to the INSPD-designated Administrator.

The INSPD-designated Administrator will review the reports and investigate to determine how the claim will proceed.

Treatment for a Work-related Injury or Illness

The agency official receiving the report shall ensure the employee receives appropriate first aid and may contact the INSPD-designated Administrator for determination whether additional medical treatment is required and information on authorized health care providers.

The INSPD-designated Administrator will direct treatment by authorized health care providers in accordance with the worker's compensation plan. A list of designated clinics for workplace injuries is located here.

There is a seven-day waiting period prior to benefits during which the employee may use available accrued leave. Employees who return to work but whose injury or illness results in intermittent appointments or treatments occurring during the employee's assigned work hours shall enter absence requests for Workers' Compensation to receive pay for the time spent on the appointment or treatment.
